Large and Small Fruits.

Varieties of fruits that may be well adapted to one section of the country may prove failures elsewhere. For New England a selection of the varieties best adapted to our soils and climate must be dependent on the sixty years' experience which we have had. We submit herewith such a list. Our stock is practically exclusively New England grown, a factor of no small importance in after results.

The Junipers are a most useful class in their variety of habit and adaptability to exposed situations and poor soils. They will repay good care in their first planting.

* All evergreens are indicated with a star.

**Kalmia latifolia*. Mountain Laurel. This most beautiful of all American native shrubs has been a specialty with us for fifty years past. Few broad leaved evergreens are as beautiful in foliage, and none can excel the beauty and delicate form of its flowers, so wonderfully shaped and ornamented with such elegant shades of color. Flowers in large and showy clusters in late June and July, varying from pure white to deep rich shades of pink. Splendid nursery grown stock, with balls of earth, burlaped, to insure best transplanting results.

*Strobis. White Pine. Without exception the White Pine is the most valuable evergreen for general use. Easily transplanted, vigorous and perfectly adapted to all New England soils and exposures. It is the most rapid growing of all hardy evergreens, yet combines longevity with a tendency to retain perfect form to the end. Aside from its ornamental character as a shade or lawn tree there is nothing that will more quickly and satisfactorily produce screens, backgrounds and windbreaks, while its timber quality is unexcelled. We have a particularly fine assortment of specially grown trees for lifting with masses of earth to insure the minimum check in transplanting.	Each.	Ten.	Hund.

Hardy Herbaceous Flowers.

About thirty years ago this valuable class of ornamental plants were largely introduced by us, and during the intervening period we have fully tested more than three thousand varieties, a large number of which we in our wide experience have proved not sufficiently desirable to recommend for general use. We here offer those varieties which in this long test we find possess distinction and such valuable flowering qualities to recommend them. We can supply many other sorts but confine ourselves to the following as the best. Herbaceous flowers are of the highest value, possessing wonderful variety in habit and season of bloom and the greatest possible range of flowering effect; with these one planting completes the expense as compared with tender plants requiring annual renewal.

Designs for Flower Gardens are constantly being made and we will be pleased to assist you in this regard if desired.

Single plants supplied at double the hundred rate, except as specially noted.

GERMAN IRIS.

Of these we have a superb collection to which we are constantly adding new varieties and discarding such as fail to show improvement over standard sorts. No garden is complete without a fair selection of these most beautiful hardy flowers. We recommend that they be planted in large groups, masses and lines, as in this manner they are most effective additions to any garden. We give below the cream of those many varieties that we have collected together for many years past. Many new varieties are under our observation which if proving distinct additions will be offered later. The following are selected for their distinction and fully cover the range of color.

Hybrid Phlox.

Of the vast number of named varieties of this class, we have selected the following for their distinction in color as well as range of bloom. To increase the list would only lead to duplication of colors.

With the remarkable improvement in colors effected in this class it is possible to have a continuous succession of blooms from July to hard frost. As a flower garden plant Phlox are indispensable, yet their floral effect can well be extended to massing in shrub borders for the purpose of adding to the flower effect long after the shrubs have passed by their main blooming period.

Anne Cook. Medium, soft, light, flesh-pink. Close, compact trusses.

Baron von Dedem. Medium. Showy trusses of deep, glistening, blood-red. One of the finest mid-season varieties. 20 cts. each; $1.75 per ten.

Coquelicot. Dwarf. Glowing cochineal-scarlet. Not as vigorous as Siebold. 20 cts. each.

Eclairer. Medium. Carmine rose, with nearly white center. A free and continuous blooming variety.

Europa. Medium. White, with large carmine eye. New and very distinct.

Eugene Dansanvilliers. Medium to tall. Soft lavender, shading to a white center. Large trusses. One of the best of its color.

F. C. von Lassburg. Medium. Purest white in large, showy panicles. A mid-season variety of the first merit.

Elisabeth Campbell. Dwarf. Large trusses of clearest salmon, with slightly darker eye. Blooms over a long season. Very choice. 25 cts. each; $2.00 per ten.

Geo. A. Strohlein. Tall. Brilliant orange-red. Distinct. 25 cts. each; $2.00 per ten.

Independence. Tall. Pure white, in showy, dense panicles. Early.

James Bennett. Tall. Salmon-pink, with darker eye.

Le Feu du Monde. Tall. Clear deep salmon-red. One of the oldest yet still one of the best.

Le Pole Nord. Tall. White, with crimson eye. Still unexcelled as the best late-blooming variety.

Le Soleil. Medium. Soft china rose, with lighter eye. One of the finest in its constant succession of flowers. Compact trusses.

Madame Meuret. Tall. Flame color, changing to rich salmon. Always very satisfactory and very free from disease.

Miss Lingard. Medium. Pure white, with faint lavender eye. Tall cylindrical spikes, borne in nearly continuous succession from July to hard frost.

R. P. Struthers. Tall. Bright salmon-pink, with darker eye.

Peach Blow. Dwarf. Delicate, soft shell-pink.

Siebold. Medium. Vermilion-red. Very distinct in the order of, yet an improved Coquelicot. 25 cts. each; $2.00 per ten.

Saison Lierval. Medium. White, with light pink center.

Stella's Choice. Tall. White, in large open panicles. Late.

Tapis Blanc. Dwarf. Pure white in large trusses. Valuable for edgings. 25 cts. each.

von Hochberg. Medium. Dark, velvety plum. 25 cts. each; $2.00 per ten.

Prices, unless otherwise noted, 15 cts. each; $1.25 per ten; $10.00 per hundred.

Manning's Selected Herbaceous Peonies

September is the best month to plant Peonies. Place the top of the crowns about two inches below the surface of the soil. Use well-worked garden soil but allow no fresh manure to touch the roots. The full beauty of each variety seldom develops before the second year after planting.

Peonies will thrive in partial shade, but give best results in open, sunny situations. Used as individual plants, in groups, lines or massed with other perennials or at the edge of shrub borders they are equally effective.

The following really distinct varieties have been selected personally from the best prize collections in the country and combine the full range of color and types in the class.

Manning's Garden Service

Is aimed to be all the words imply, not only in the publication, but also in the rendering of a unique service to all who have to do with or look forward to having a garden.

Mr. J. Woodward Manning, whose work as a Nurseryman and Landscape Designer, is well known in New land and throughout the United States, will give personal supervision to the Service and its publications. The first-hand experiences of more than a quarter of a century in the artistic, practical and economical development of public and private grounds is thus obtainable.

While the Service will include the supplying of Horticultural Material, including Trees, Shrubs, Plants and Garden Accessories, Mr. Manning is unattached to any one nursery or source of supply. This will bring to all those who use Manning's Garden Service the opportunity to procure their supply from the largest and best sources in the world. Advice on all horticultural problems, planting designs, and all such matters that have to do with the making and maintaining of Gardens, Country Places, Industrial Plants and Public and Private Parks, is included in this Service. Communications will have prompt and intelligent consideration.
